

Group Management Strategies

sponsored by

Central New York Teaching Center, SETRC and Syracuse Teacher Center

In general, the amount of time spent in committees and meetings is wasteful and often the invisible elephants are never addressed. This program will address the non-verbal skills needed to successfully work with adults. Learn how to: operate from a facilitative vs. managerial vs. leadership posture, respond to functional vs. dysfunctional groups, be on the alert for the variables that cause dysfunctionality, and effectively communicate about difficult topics by using a visual approach instead of an oral approach and more.
